IT Projects that Make a Difference

Minneapolis – July 17, 2007 – Trissential, a business improvement and project implementation company, introduces Projecy® Select software, a tool that shifts through proposals and identifies IT projects with the highest potential to make a business better.

For organizations considering dozens or even hundreds of IT project proposals during an annual planning period, Projecy Select ensures that the most significant of those stand out. In addition to the time and effort it saves, Projecy Select assists organizations to consistently and accurately allocate vital resources where those resources will do the most good.

Authorized personnel log onto Project Select and enter information on their proposed IT initiative. A menu driven format leads them through the proposal entry process. Project Select ensures that each proposal presents the business case for the initiative, anticipated return on investment, and every other vital piece of information. Project Select analyzes and prioritizes proposals based on the overall value and return objectives of company leadership.

“Organizations that want to step up from spreadsheet analyses of initiatives to an effective automated tool should consider Project Select,” said Michael Vinje, PMP, principal and vice president of Trissential’s Project Management Practice. “Large organizations dissatisfied with evaluating initiatives that use unwieldy, hard-to-support, and inflexible enterprise project management systems will find Project Select a welcome change.”

Project brand software applications enable managers to predict project outcomes — the word Project combines project and prophecy. In addition to Project Select, Trissential offers Project Process software, a first of its kind application for helping project and portfolio management operationalize the Project Management Body of Knowledge (PMBOK). Project Process software raises project management maturity and enables delivery of projects on time and within budget.

Project Select and Project Process software can be purchased as stand alone applications or included at no charge with Trissential business improvement and project implementation engagements.
