Trissential Names Business Development Manager for Enterprise Applications

MINNEAPOLIS, May 26, 2010 — Trissential, a business improvement and project management and implementation company, has hired Dan LaVigne to lead business development for its Enterprise Applications Practice.

LaVigne is responsible for introducing Trissential Enterprise Applications capabilities to organizations throughout the (12 state) North Central Region of the US, securing capabilities presentations, and fielding requests for proposals. The Enterprise Applications Practice principally focuses on large-scale and complex enterprise resource planning (ERP) strategy development and technology implementations.

LaVigne comes to Trissential from Oracle USA, where he held positions in business development and applications sales. Prior to Oracle he was a business-to-business sales representative for SimonDelivers. LaVigne is a graduate of St. John's University in Collegeville, earning degrees in both business and communications. He graduated from Cook County High School in Grand Marais where he was class valedictorian.
